If you imagine that the box of X's tothe left is an image, what I want to be able to do is flow a series of paragraphs around the image so that once the bottom of the image is reached, then text will flow back to the left margin. I know that it would be possible to something like this using tables, but I can't see how to have a generic solution. There are two examples of this in the demonstration section of the reportlab site. If you look at the "minimal" euro python conference brochure, at the end of the timetable section (page 8), there are adverts for "AdSu" and "O'Reilly". I can see how the AdSu one might be done generically, but the O'Reilly, unsure... I guess I'm hoping that I've missed something, and that it's actually easy to do using platypus.
